There are various reasons as to why partners may end up breaking up some are; loss of trust in each other, loss of love between each other and growing incompatibility. However there are various solutions to this such as playing the hard to get game, reconnecting both of your emotions, striking exciting conversations and finding new ways to do things.

First on the list is playing hard to get. This involves the use of mind games so as to woo your partner by making them feel lonely and insecure. This can however be dangerous if overdone as the partner may not tolerate these games or may reverse them back. Though when used appropriately, it's magic can be evident as it may draw the loved one back.

New ways in doing things you were used to should be considered. This is a technique which will keep your partners mind guessing what's next. This is by doing good things you have never done to your partner before to keep them guessing what you will do next.

One should also learn to deliver information in different ways, so as to excite one's partner. This can be through getting to know more of what your partner likes and implementing it in your conversations with them. Figures of speech and expressions can be used to make the conversation exciting.

Lastly, one must most importantly emotionally reconnect with their partner. This is through getting to know the finer and inner details of your partner. This can be like asking their life long ambitions and fantasies. This helps one drift from the usual details you know about them, and learn more of your partner which leads to some emotional attachment when one gets to know deep feelings of their partner.
